> OF A SINGULAR RELIGIOUS SECT IN SHANTUNG.

(Communicated to N. C. Daily News.) It has been remarked as a singular fact that of the Sect of Nestorian Christians, who flourished extensively in China during the 13th century, little or nothing is known at the pre-

That they enjoyed the protection and received the fostering care of the Yuen dynusty, and were in turn cruelly persecuted and finally exterminated by the Mings, is all that we know of them. The few tablets and monuments erected by them which still survive stand as dumb witnesses to the fact that they existed at one time; but they give no trace of their devoted faith. Of their creeds and doctrines, literature, and religious rites and coremonies, no record can be found. Like the noble red men of America. these pions Nestorian Fathers have been forgotten even in "the songe and chronicles of their exterminators." Their names and years are forgotton, and the story of their pure lives. invincible zeal, and sublime devotion is unwritten; but, that these good men left behind them Footprints in the sands of time," may be reasonably inferred from the following:--There exists in the southern border of the province of Shantung, a peculiar society or sect, who profess to have received their doctrine originally from the West. They are known as he "Nameleas Sect." and are unable to give: the date of the introduction of their religion into China. They have a knowledge of an Invisible. Omnipresent, Almighty Being whom bey worship. This God whom they worship is known amongst them by three names .-- The Inving Buildha of the West-the One not born of fatter or mother,—and the Heavenly Father—all meaning and pointing to the One

God, who is eternal. They do not worship idols. Each member of this seat repeats daily a byinn or moral discourse, in which such sentiments as the following occur:- "Do not injure others in order to benefit yourself;"-"A from evil thoughts, words, or deeds;"-- "In possession of the truth there is nothing that may not be accomplished: "-" Hide the truth with all diligence, in your hearts;"-"Those who understand the received Mystery, may become perfect through the Truth: "-" Let none covet ourth's pleasures, but set your hearts firmly on the Heavenly Paradise:"-"The days of mun upon the curth are swift as an arrow, covet not therefore the pleasures of the world; - Proclaim the truth on the cross streets: when the time arrives that a preaching stand may be creeted everywhere, the truth will be made manifest;"-" When the Saviour comes from the West, men will have peace," &c., &c.,

These people all believe in future rewards and punishments, but they have no clearly defined notions of the bappinness which awaits the faithful. They speak of a Saviour to come from the West. They have no temples, but tores times each day, every one, in a sitting postage, with eyes closed, silently offers up prayer to God, and on the let and loth of each Moon they bern incense to him, but they have no alters, nor do hey make use of paper money. Every member of the Sect is expected to contribute money according to his ability, but there is no computsion, and both one is left to determine for himself the amount of his contribution. These contributions are paid to the leader under whose guidance the members con. tributing may be at the time. The aggregate amount contributed by the members is paid over by their leaders to one still higher in authority. antilit reaches the highest officer of the distriot, who takes the whole amount West, and pays it again to another, who is supposed in turn to take it still further. West and pay it over to the proper person, and so on until it reaches its final destination. It is a little singular, but no one appears to know what use is to be made of this money, or just where its final destination is. All agree that the money is to go "to the West," and that it is a meritorions act to give liberally, and that those who do give liberally will be rewarded; but further than this promise of good to the giver himself, no one appears to consider. It is understood that each leader retains a certain percentage of the amount which passes through his hands, for his own benefit; in which case it is not difficult to see that the money will in time fail to go beyond a certain point. Held in Bugar smoke for twenty minutes, the pain ceased and promised speedy recovery."

WHY WE TIRE OUT SO EARLY. Half a century or more ago, among the hardy boatmen of our harbour, there was one tall, sinewy and handsome. How be would while away his hours in ferrying people a few miles down the coast; anon in unearthing the basking clam or succulent oyster and escorting them to the Battery and a market. In those haloyoff days, like Jesse's son of old, he little dreamed of the great work he would one day lay on the back be was then making strong for its burden. Years rolled by, and now at eighty, when he rides easily king among the men of the iron road, be loves to tell how once as night came on and a black storm with it-he fooled his brother fishermen into thinking they had better keep under shelter, while he in the friendly dusk hove up anchor, and, running for the city, manipulated a firm corner on the juicy bivalves for nearly a whole week. What in him we would note is not this way of getting rich, so suggestive of a Rothschild after Waterloo, but the stout bealth he got, which has stood by bim so well that now, at four soure years, his eye is yet stark and strong, like a hale man's at thirty-five, and his nerves keep so steady that he daily reins with sure hand a pair of fiery steeds almost as swift as his iron ones which gallop West in seventy mile dashes. How is it that this man has kept together this priceless stock of health and vigor, and in these days, too, when so many men are worn dean out at forty? He has certainly his on some way of taking care of himself and keeping up his wondrous force and energy till no man can yet say what will be their limit, which would indeed be worth the knowing. To ask whether he, a half-grown boy, tugged numerous books to school, and day and night pored over them; that he might be the village producy and tickle his foolish master's foolish vanity, as is the fashion nowadays, would be to nek a question which would be self answering. Whether by chance or good planning, until the man was well grown and his joints thoroughly tightenes there was, as there should have been, abundant, vigorous, hearty out-door life, a boyhood stretching on to well nigh thirty, and then, when later yours brought their responsibility he was ready for it, and the more he got the better he seemed to like it. He never hurried, and not until long afterwards had be anything like woulth. All know that men seem now to break down much earlier than they used. They see it everywhere. Our Vice-President an invalid ; Senators also; Fort Fisher's hero, "aging" fast; an editor, aspiring to our highest place politically, reeling into his grave; even his great brain unequal to breasting the storm of detraction and shameless insult one must face if he would try for that much coveted prize stone of our jadges breaking down before he is forty; a busy able lawyer of our city driven by overwork firs to a home fur those whose faculties have been shattered and then to terrible suicide; the son of another member of our Bar bringing home the highest honors of an English university and shortly after going out and taking his life: Bright's disease, of late alarmingly prevalent, hurrying off a great railroad magnate at sixty
